

-17-

A computer system includes a computer wireless transceiver capable of relaying wireless communications to and from a computer main unit, a computer display device, and a monitor wireless transceiver connected to the computer display device. The monitor wireless transceiver conducts wireless communications with the computer wireless transceiver. The monitor wireless transceiver and the computer display device form a wireless computer monitor that receives data from and transmits data to the computer main unit in a wireless manner.